Q4. Share any comment	I oppose PTAG's recommendations for mitigation related to wind turbines and project infrastructure located within the 2.0- to 0.6-mile buffer around ferruginous hawk nests. Ferruginous hawks are highly sensitive to disturbance, and development within established buffer zones poses significant risks to nesting success, habitat quality, and long-term population stability. Mitigation measures cannot fully offset the impacts of placing turbines so close to active nests. Avoidance and maintenance of full protective buffers around all known nests should be prioritized over reduced protections and partial exclusions. Thank you for considering this comment.
